

The exact number of these vehicles cannot be ascertained as it means a task identical to counting an incubator full of day old chicks. But regardless of the number, they are to transport a large part of the student body to the big games. It has been estimated that each machine can carry ten passengers, providing no trunks are taken.

We Must Win from Bates

Is Maine's veteran football team to all intents the best we have had in years, going down to Bates Saturday to fight the first battle of the state series games without support? Our clamorous answer would immediately be, "No, never! Maine teams are always supported!" Yet with 1117 students in the University, only 250 have signified any intention of making the trip to Lewiston and only about 50 have signed up to go by train.

Something is certainly wrong somewhere, but what is it? Can it be possible that Maine students care so little whether or not their team wins that they will not go to Lewiston to back it in the first, and probably the hardest, game of the three that will determine who shall be football champions of the State?

Two years ago there were over 400 Maine supporters at the Bates game. Everyone got there who started, and everyone had a good time. They cheered themselves hoarse; they drowned out the Bates cheers, and Maine was not defeated.

This year Bates has a strong team, and again they will have the support of their entire student body and the advantage of the home field.

The Blue team of Maine represents every one of us. They are not a group of men playing for individual honors, but an organized team fighting for Maine. It is our task to show them that we are every one of us behind them. We must convince them that they must win that game if human strength can accomplish it. But are they likely to be convinced or greatly inspired by only 250 supporters? "What," they will ask, "of the other 867? Aren't they with us?"

Of course we are with them, but the only way to make them think so is by going to that game and cheering our heads off. We must take that state series, one, two, three! And the way to do so is by getting a good start.

So let's every one of us get down there to Lewiston Saturday, somehow, and let that old Blue team know we are with them!

The University Banner

In years past Maine has always had its banner, which proudly headed all processions, and waved over the heads of its supporters during football games. Last year the old banner could not be found, and a much inferior substitute was used, which was exceedingly unsatisfactory.

This year, as yet, none at all has made its appearance. Surely a good banner in the true colors of the University is needed at the games this fall as much as we need the band or the bear. The Campus believes that the Athletic Association, as an organization composed of all the students, would be more than justified in purchasing one, for it is certainly the opinion of all that we should have a banner.

Editorial Policy

In a statement last May of the editorial policy which would be observed by the Campus this year we mentioned, among other things, that our editorials would be the product of no one mind, but would be representative of campus-wide student opinion.

It has been our object this year to put this policy in practice, and in so doing we have published several editorials written by different individuals, and shall continue to do so in the future, for we believe that the person the most interested is the one best qualified to pass opinions or offer suggestions concerning various matters. The editor-in-chief, however, assumes full responsibility for the editorials, for nothing is published as such that does not pass his approval and coincide with his opinion.

Examining the Faculty

On page one of The Campus, there is an interesting communication from an anonymous individual who suggests that faculty members be given "a dose of their own medicine" in the shape of psychological and general information tests. Accustomed as we are to accept our teachers as omniscient, it sounds like heresy to us.

But is it? Are we positive that our instructors and professors invariably know what they are talking about? Are we sure that there are no mental defectives in the group? We have no definite proof.

The statement has been made by critics of the American educational system that "anyone above the moron grade can get a degree from an American college." Acquiring a doctor of philosophy degree is not difficult, we are told, if the individual is willing to spend many hours toiling over dusty books which no one else wants to read.

If these things are true, our correspondent is amply justified in suggesting that our faculty members be given general information and psychology tests. The results might ease our minds of any doubts we may entertain regarding the intellectual status of the men who can "make us or break us."

ATHLETIC NOTES

TEAMS EVENLY MATCHED

The beginning of the State series will see Bates, Bowdoin, Maine and New Hampshire State rather evenly matched. Bowdoin and Bates lost to Wesleyan by practically the same scores. Both New Hampshire and Bowdoin defeated Norwich by two touchdowns. This week Bowdoin came thru against Brown by the same score that Maine won with, both games played on home fields.

Both Bates and Bowdoin seem to be developing their air games, Bates' only touchdown, as she lost to Tufts last week, came as a result of her forward passing. Bowdoin completed 12 of 18 forwards in her game last week.

Norwich put up a game battle with Bowdoin but the White put it over 14 to 0 on their home field.

New Hampshire gave Rhode Island State a decisive beating 13 to 0.

MORE FIELD HOCKEY

The girls' hockey team will play Bangor High on the Bangor field, Tuesday, Oct. 23. The team will take the 3:10 car to Bangor that afternoon. The girls need the support of every student who can possibly attend. Show the girls you realize how hard they worked Saturday. If you can't scrape up the change to go, at least appear and give the team a real send off. Show your college spirit and help the team along. They want to see a big crowd there on the Bangor field.

PARTY FOR SARGENT GIRLS

A tea was given to the hockey team from Sargent in Balentine Hall after the game Saturday. A number of the matrons and wives of the faculty were present, among whom were Mrs. Little, Mrs. Munson and Mrs. Estabrooke, Miss Huesman and Miss Goodwin, the Bangor physical training director, were also present. Miss Sally Fisher and her committee, who did such splendid work in entertaining the Sargent girls, were present to help with the tea.

Two cups were given recently, one to go to the individual winner of the Interclass Cross Country Race (Arthur Hillman) and one to go to the winner of the Varsity Freshman Cross Country race to be run on November 10. The giver is unknown.

The Track Department wishes to thank those who officiated at the relay race last Thursday. Among those were Prof. Pollard, Captain Ready, Prof. Brooks, "Hamp" Bryant, Ayer, Kennison and Hall.

was eligible for election, and each player controlled one vote.

Elliott was an all-round athlete at Millinocket High. He played football and baseball four years, for two years being the captain of the baseball team. He was also a member of the basketball team for one year.

Due to injuries he has played only in the Millinocket game.

ing you his way of finding it. Furthermore, he regards his own way of finding life as the only way.

"The martyr, disappointed with wrestling with material things has turned away to find happiness. He is pained to see so many people living for things which will not last. The wish follower feels his way through life. He seeks those things in which satisfaction is more immediately present and does not know the meaning of sacrifice. The individual out for adventure and his own pleasure is missing a very unique experience—the experience of self-denial. Many people never have the opportunity to enjoy this, and therefore will not find some of the greatest rewards in life.

"The ancient Greeks believed there was no distinction between a good life and life. They even went so far as to say there was no such thing as a bad life. An evil, foolish intemperate and irreligious life should not be called a bad life, but rather dying, long-drawn out."

Co-eds Speak for First Time at College Rally

"Prexy" Little made an appeal to the student body, urging them to help as much as possible in getting the football team in shape for the state series. This was Dr. Little's first appearance at a rally this year.

Coach Kanaly, as fourth speaker, showed the student body the prospects of the cross country teams and announced the interclass relay races to be held during the next three weeks. Coach Kanaly is doing fine work among the students and their cooperation and support show their esteem for him.

"Bill" Murray spoke of the Freshman football team and urged the students to stand behind the members of the team. He said that the school as a whole, and the Freshman class in particular, were not giving the proper support to the first year football men.

A resolution was passed by a vote of the student body, recommending that the athletic association be given permanent possession of "Bananas."

A collection was taken to send the band to Bates and the sum of forty-six dollars was realized. However, as this is not enough to take the band to Bates, another collection will probably be taken in the near future.

The rally closed with the singing of the Stein song.

"Debating Broadens the Mind," Says "Ed" Curran

Thus far this season the Maine Debating Society has received challenges for debates from four colleges. They are: Boston College, Rhode Island State, Clark University and the College of the City of New York. Boston College, which defeated Maine last year in Boston, wishes to hold the return engagement at Orono before Christmas, on the question: "Resolved, That the United States Shall Enter the World Court."

The first trial debate of the season was held last week on the world court. A negative team consisting of Harry Stern of Bangor, David Hoxie of Auburn and Norman Davis of Dover-Foxcroft won the decision over the affirmative team which consisted of Arthur Brewster of Brookline, C. F. Morrison of Bangor and Benjamin Epstein of Boston.

Edward M. Curran, president of the society, gave two talks in chapel last week concerning its work.

GIRL'S RALLY

A joint meeting of the Y. W. C. A. and the Girls' Athletic Association was held at Balentine before the big Rally in the Gymnasium Wednesday evening. After a short prelude by the Mandolin Club, the meeting was turned over to the Athletic Association.

Enthusiasm and excitement ran high over the hockey game with Sargent Saturday afternoon. The new school and class songs, written under the direction of the Athletic Association last spring were sung with a vim. The University songs were practiced for the coming track meet and football game. And new songs written especially for the hockey game were enthusiastically practiced and learned.

After the singing was all over Phyllis Griffin, the girls' cheer leader, came in to lead them. There was splendid response in a great part due to Miss Griffin, the first girls' cheer leader at this University. Full of "pep", the girls quickly dispersed to gather again at Alumni for the rally.

HAVE YOU NOTICED?

That all Jiggs aren't henpecked?

That the Sargent goal-keeper Drew Stearns instead of goal?

That Rudie Valent's trousers are popular with the freshmen?

That Prexy aided in the choice of hosiery for the hockey team?

We Have With Us

just as much as Leon loved the farm and farming, just so much Stephen, his brother, hated it. Both went to the village school at Solon and when Leon entered the high school there, he knew that he wanted to go to Bowdoin College as the first step to becoming a doctor. It wasn't an easy task, however, and he had to teach school to earn the money to go to college. His first position as a teacher he held when he was 16 years old.

At Bowdoin it wasn't Leon Merrill any more, but "Chub," and it is said that he drew friends to him in those days just as easily as he does now. He was graduated in 1889 and started the practice of medicine in his home town. But just when success in his chosen field loomed before him, his eyes failed, and for a time it was feared that he would lose his sight. He was forced to give up his practice, although he still kept his office, and he entered the drug business.

His experience in the village pharmacy was the first of the transition from medicine to business, and yet in a comparatively short time he was given the management of the five creameries in this state of a big concern dealing solely in cream. What office practice in medicine he had retained was entirely given up and he was thoroughly interested in business. He was soon appointed State Dairy Instructor and his visits to all the dairies in Maine took him over the entire state and brought him many new friends.

In 1910 he came to the University, and from the beginning was head of the agricultural department. He was not, however, appointed dean until Dean Victor Gardiner went to Oregon. Later he was appointed director of the Agricultural Extension Service, a work in which he was the prime mover, and it was he who obtained an appropriation from the Rockefeller Foundation to give the work a real start. Through his efforts, agricultural extension in this state has become a vital factor to Maine farming and he directs the work of many agents throughout the state. The work of the Boys' and Girls' Agricultural Clubs and the good they have accomplished are due directly to him. He is also the director of the dairy and poultry agents in Maine.

One of the most trying periods of his life was the time when he was a "dollar a year man," serving his country as Food Administrator for the State of Maine. It was a man-sized job and much credit is due Dean Merrill for the splendid way in which, at such a time, he organized those under him and kept food distribution unified throughout the state. At the end of the war he was on the verge of nervous prostration and it required some time for him to "come back."

Fraternally, he is the head of the Odd Fellows in Maine and a permanent representative to the sovereign lodge from this state. He is the head of Phi Kappa Phi here and a member of Alpha Zeta.

Dean Merrill has been characterized as one of the finest organizers in the state and he is certainly one of Maine's biggest men. He is a stickler for system and he expects those who work under him to see to it that things progress as they are intended. That is the secret of the great amount of work that he does every day in the year.

He really hasn't time for a hobby but if he has a spare moment it is devoted to either his miniature garden out in back of his house or to his books and magazines. The night that he isn't reading when the bell in Wingate tolls its maximum number of strokes is a rare one. He reads for diversion and what he reads serves to give his mind the variety that rests it. Incidentally, Dean Merrill's wife is a woman of beautiful character, a lover of birds, and the protector and Good Samaritan to every kitty that is left in the fraternity houses when classes end in June.

Following are a few interesting statistics relating to the test:

No. of students taking test	345
Average age of students	18½ yrs.
Highest mark possible in test	96
Highest mark attained	91
