Masque Production 'Hotel Universe' Well Received

By Raymond Valliere

With the production of Philip Barry's "Hotel Universe," the Maine Masque took a step into the realm of the metaphysical. The scene of this rather involved play was the terrace of a house in southern France, which terrace seemed to have no connection with this gross earth, but, as one of the characters said, hung "like an island in the sky."

The characters in the play were a group of young Americans living without any purpose in life, and moved to deep introspection by the recent suicide of one of their number. Couple, then, if you will, an elderly mystic with such brooding characters in such an unearthly locale and the result is bound to be unusual. It is.

The elderly mystic, the scene, and their own brooding introspection combined to wait the characters back to that point in their respective lives in which their disillusionment and cynicism was rooted.

Sustained Interest Maintained
They looked upon the past as it actually was and not as they had talked themselves into believing it was, and in their subconsciousness they broke this stifling hold of the past. Freed from this unnatural situation by the death of the mystic, they felt themselves revitalized and set out anew

Vincent Sheehan To Speak Dec. 16

Vincent Sheehan, war correspondent and author of several well-known books, will speak at the Bangor City Hall Monday evening, Dec. 16, at 8:15. Mr. Sheehan, whose subject will be "As the Scene Changes," is appearing under the auspices of the Junior Welfare League of Bangor.

His best-known books are "Personal History," a Literary Guild selection, and "Not Peace but a Sword," a Book of the Month choice. Others include "The Pieces of a Fan," "San Felice," "The Tide," and "An American Among the Rifles."

As foreign correspondent for the Chicago Tribune and various news syndicates in the late 1920's and early '30's, Sheehan was the only correspondent to interview the Rif leader Abd El-Krim, during the Rif rebellion in Morocco.

He travelled through Russia, Persia, China, and Jerusalem, and covered the Ruhr occupation, the Lausanne conference, and Fascist march on Rome, and the overthrow of the Spanish monarchy.

In more recent years he has covered the civil war in Spain, the Nazi march into the Sudetenland, and the Munich settlement.

His home at present is in New York City, where he lives with his English wife, whom he married in 1935, and their three-year old daughter.

to a purpose in life.
It is obvious that such an involved play, with little action but much conversation, placed a considerable load upon the cast if they were to sustain the interest of the audience. That they did just that is to their credit, for, with the exception of one or two moments when the audience was somewhat mystified as to what was happening on the stage, the cast effectively conveyed to the audience the spirit of the play.

The most interesting part was the scene in which Pat Farley, played by John Robie, under the mystical influence of the locale, revealed the cause of his bitterness and disillusionment to his old love, Ann Field (Calista Buzzell). This scene was closely rivalled by that between Lily Malone, as played by Virginia Howe, and Stephen Field, the mystic, as portrayed by Russell Woolley.

The actors were all on their toes during the course of the play and no single member of the cast can be said to have played above the heads of his or her co-workers. Virginia Howe's portrayal of Lily Malone was an extremely capable piece of acting. She is one of the few acting members of the Masque who can be profane without appearing horrified at the sound of the words she is uttering.

Sheehy Makes Capable Debut
Frances Sheehy, a newcomer to the Masque stage, showed her ability to advantage in her role as Alice Kendall; while Russell Woolley's characterization of Stephen Field, the elderly mystic whose supersensory powers gave him a strange influence over the other characters, was excellent. But then, one is accustomed to seeing Woolley give a good performance.

'Ski America' Here Saturday

Sidney N. Shurcliff and his new movie, "Ski America 2nd," will be featured at a University assembly in the Little Theatre Saturday evening, Dec. 14, at 7:00 p.m.

Shurcliff, who appeared here in January, 1939, with his first picture, "Ski America First," is being brought here by the Maine Outing Club with the cooperation of the University Assembly Committee, John D. FitzPatrick, club president, said this week.

The movies, which are all in color, include scenes taken at Mt. Cranmore and Tuckerman Ravine in New Hampshire, the National Jumping Meet, the Hochgebirge Races, the Dartmouth-McGill meet, Sun Valley, the Sugar Bowl, and at Mt. Hood and Mt. Baker on the west coast.

Dictators Now At Height Says Roberts

Noted Clergyman Assembly Speaker This Tuesday

Declaring that the lust for power has reached its climax in the hands of the European dictators, Dr. Richard Roberts, former Moderator of the Canadian Council of Churches, spoke on the subject "The Cross and the Swastika" at an assembly in the Memorial Gymnasium Tuesday, Dec. 10.

Disaster Befalling Europe
"Upon your generation," he said, "will fall the task of averting a disaster in this country similar to the one which is befalling Europe. You must reverse the whole evil tradition out of which wars have come. It is not merely a political task—it must be conceived as a spiritual and moral task first of all."

Dr. Roberts told his audience that the world is threatened today by a race of dehumanized, robotized men who live by the law of the jungles. But, he added, in defeating this "big man complex" we must be careful in using the same tactics which Hitler is using. We must become supermen only in the sense of high faith and character.

God Surpasses the Dictators
"The big supermen of today are Hitler, Stalin, and Mussolini, but one who far surpasses them all is God." Dr. Roberts added that the dictators are fond of speaking of their realism, but he said they are fooling themselves; they are being disillusioned. "God is the only realist, for the sign of the cross is the regalia of a saved humanity."

Boston Alumni Start Loan Fund

University of Maine alumni residing in Greater Boston have established a loan fund at the University, President Arthur A. Hauck announced recently. Under the plan adopted, this fund, which is to be known as The Maine Alumni Association of Boston Loan Fund, will ultimately amount to a total of $5,000.

The terms of the gift specify that loans may be made to any male student enrolled at the University, but special consideration is to be given to applicants whose homes are in Massachusetts.

Need, character, scholastic standing, personality, and leadership in extracurricular activities are qualifications to be considered in making loans from this fund. The administration of the fund is left entirely with the University.

The officers of the Maine Alumni Association of Boston are Warren H. Preble '21, Waban, Mass., who is president of the group; Raymond D. Douglass '15, of Belmont, Mass., and Malcolm H. Oak '15, of Arlington, Mass., vice presidents; Duncan Cotting '38, Boston, Mass., secretary; William L. Bailey '26, Melrose Highlands, Mass., treasurer.

The announcement of the selection of Miss Banton from a group of five junior candidates was made by Col. Robert K. Alcott, head of the military department. Barbara R. Ashworth, last year's Honorary Lieutenant-Colonel, presented Miss Banton with her commission.

About 400 couples attended the ball, which is sponsored by Scabbard and Blade, honorary military society. Music was furnished by Claude Thornhill and his orchestra.

Oxford Lecturer Will Talk On Hitlerism

Dr. Kary Polanyi, lecturer at Oxford University and the University of London, will be on campus from Dec. 16 to Dec. 18, speaking at seven different University functions. Dr. Polanyi will speak at an assembly Dec. 16 in the Memorial Gymnasium at 9:30 a.m. on the topic "Can Hitlerism Solve the European Problem?"

At 4:15 on Monday he will speak before a class of economics majors on "The Theory of Fascism; Deadlock of Politics and Economics."

Three Speeches Tuesday
Dr. Polanyi has three engagements on Tuesday, speaking at 11:00 a.m. to an English History class on "Forms of Life of the British Working Class," at 3:15 p.m. before the Maine Government class in 6 South Stevens on "Education for Politics in England and the United States," and on Tuesday evening at a faculty discussion of the University program during the present crisis.

He will speak to a Modern Society class Wednesday morning at 9:00 a.m. on "Education and Society in Central Europe, England, and the United States." His final campus appearance will be at a science seminar at Merrill Hall Wednesday noon, where he will speak on "Can World Economy Be Restored?"

Prominent Austrian Author
Dr. Polanyi is an Oxford University lecturer and University of London lecturer in extension courses and in tutorial classes. He was formerly on the faculty of the People's College in Vienna, a member of the Budapest bar, and joint-editor of "Der Oesterreichische Volksgeist."

He is the author of papers which appeared in "Archiv für Sozialwissenschaft und Sozialpolitik," "Heidelberg," "Europe Today," and was joint-editor of "Christianity and the Social Revolution," published in 1934.

In 1935 Dr. Polanyi gave a six-weeks' course of lectures at the Des Moines, Iowa, Public Forums, and visited many colleges and universities in the south. He came to the United States again in 1936, when he spoke before student audiences in the southwest.

New Library Rules Successful

The new library rules, which have been in effect in the University library since Oct. 21, are a success in the opinion of both the library staff and students of the University.

The new plan has become permanent. According to the staff, there is less noise and confusion now in the evening hours, and both students and library workers state that the new plan makes library work easier.

Under the new system the library remains open in the evenings from Monday to Thursday until 10:30, one hour later than previously.

Reserved books may only be taken out between the hours of 5:00 p.m. Saturday and 2:00 p.m. Sunday. In this way reserve books will not be out at any time when anyone is likely to be in the library.

Frosh Team Wins Intramural Debate

Philip F. Day and Albert F. Reynolds, freshman team, won the intramural debating tournament, defeating George Bearce and David Hempstead, sophomores, in the final round Nov. 26.

In the preliminary round, Day and Reynolds defeated Elton Rich and William Brown, and Elbridge Davis and Howard Cousins defeated Joseph Goldberg and George Limberis.

Bearce and Hempstead defeated Stanley Rudman and Herbert Wing, and George Fuller and Robert Atkinson defeated John Steinmetz and Webster Mason.

In the semi-final round, Day and Reynolds eliminated Davis and Cousins, while Bearce and Hempstead won over Fuller and Atkinson.

Average Student Visits Health Service Thrice Yearly

By Wilbert O'Neil

Each student in college faces the prospect of visiting the University Health Service three times each year, and, in one of these cases, his treatment will require a surgical dressing. His chances are about fifty-fifty that he will or will not receive orthopedic treatment in the course of the year.

During the school year of 1939-40, nearly 7,000 cases were treated at the University Health Service, receiving a total of about 12,000 treatments. The year before, 1938-39, 6,907 individual cases received 12,315 treatments.

Many Cases Accidental
Figures released by the University Health Service this week seem to indicate that many of the cases are direct results of accidents, although no accurate record is kept of the nature of each treatment.

Last year, 991 individuals required a total of 2,338 surgical treatments, and in 1938-39, over 1,000 individual cases received an average of two surgical dressings each. During the past two years about 1,000 cases have received over 2,000 orthopedic treatments.

Hauck Appoints Committee
In the belief that accidents on the campus of the University of Maine may be reduced to a minimum, a Safety Committee was appointed by Pres. Arthur A. Hauck this summer. The duties of this committee are to create safer conditions wherever an opportunity is found. It was an outgrowth of an attempt to investigate safety measures on the highways.

Prof. Weston S. Evans, head of the Civil Engineering department, is chairman of the group, which includes members of the faculty and students of the University. Faculty members include: Dean Lamert S. Corbett, Prof. Edward F. Dow, Prof. John R. Crawford, Prof. Eugene C. Meyer, Prof. Pearl S. Green, and Henry Doten, business manager of the University.

Students on the committee are David O. Greenlaw and Esther H. Drummond.

It is the firm belief of this Safety Committee that accidents don't just happen; they can be prevented. One of the measures which they are undertaking is that of safety education and educational publicity by means of newspapers and posters. They want to show students and faculty what causes accidents, how they may be prevented, and also what to do in case of serious accidents.

Committee Needs Support
But it is practically impossible for any kind of safety committee to function effectively and efficiently if it does not have the whole-hearted support of everyone. Every student and instructor of the University should report any unsafe practices and conditions to the committee. With this support, it is believed that many serious accidents which occur in laboratories, classrooms, and on the highways, may be prevented.

This is the first in a series of articles to appear in the "Campus" in connection with the University's new safety program.

'Cadet' Grows From Monthly Into Weekly 'Campus'

By Richard Cranch

"The Cadet," first literary outburst of the students at the Maine State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, was fated to end unpretentiously. It ended like any entity that is alive, it grew until it changed.

In the growth, the articles changed in nature from weighty theses to more newsy current reports, advertising was initiated for financial help, and the editing became more exacting.

In 1894, after nine years of publication, "The Cadet" reduced its size and acquired a Maine pale blue cover like a sunnuf magazine. By the end of its time, it was illustrated by half-tone engravings.

In 1899, the monthly had its name changed from "The Cadet," in honor of the Coburn Cadets of the early R.O.T.C., to "The Campus," in honor of the setting of the college. With the issue of June, 1904, it became "The Maine Campus."

By October, 1905, it changed from a monthly to a weekly magazine. The present newspaper size was initiated in 1915 with the establishment of printing facilities on campus.

"The Cadet" grew and changed just as the old State College has grown and changed into the University of Maine.

College Students Praise CCC, NYA

Social Security Also Favored; WPA, AAA Attacked

By Students Opinions Survey

AUSTIN, Texas.—Early in November the voters of the nation returned President Roosevelt to the White House for a third term. The New Deal, now in power for another four years, will probably grow more and more to be a permanent component of American economy. Which of its features should be continued; which should be discarded?

College students have an interest in the kind of nation they will live in when they enter active citizenship. Student Opinion Surveys of America has polled a representative sample of the entire U. S. enrollment in order to arrive at an accurate measurement of college sentiment on this issue. Most collegians everywhere told interviewers that what they like about the New Deal is this:

1. The opportunities it has created for youth under C.C.C. and N.Y.A.

2. The security it has brought to the unfortunate aged.

Students Score W.P.A., A.A.A.

The W.P.A. and the A.A.A., the poll shows, are scored by the greatest number of students as the most successful of all the alphabetical agencies. Failure of the administration to solve unemployment is the greatest shortcoming of the New Deal, one out of seven (15 per cent) believe.

Last April, when Student Opinion Surveys first gauged sentiment on the New Deal, college students sanctioned Uncle Sam's assumption of social guardianship. But comparison of those figures with the survey published today shows increased concentration of approval on the C.C.C., N.Y.A., and social security. Following are the percentages:

C.C.C. N.Y.A. Draw Approval
As the most successful agencies that should be continued—

Today April
C.C.C. mentioned by 25% 20%
N.Y.A. mentioned by 23 16
Social security mentioned by 22 8

Other agencies mentioned by 30 56
As the most unsuccessful agencies that should not be continued—

W.P.A. mentioned by 27%
A.A.A. mentioned by 11
Other agencies mentioned by 54

A Thought for Maine Colleges

Satisfaction with Claude Thornhill's orchestra at the Military Ball was very evident last week. And announcement was made at Bowdoin a short time ago that Count Basie would play there just before Christmas.

All of which brings this thought to mind. Could not the colleges in the state get together and arrange to engage the same orchestra on two successive nights, with considerable savings? Would they not then be able to secure "big time" bands without overly straining their finances?

W. B. R.

The Colleges and the Far East

Between bomb-blasts in London and Berlin, Americans catch glimpses of another war. Many see in the Sino-Japanese conflict far-reaching influences on the western world. In the American college press, opinions differ as to the imminence of hostilities with Japan. But continued aid to China and ever-stiffening resistance to Tokyo find vociferous support.

Fact that the recently reopened Burma Road stays open is called "significant" by the University of Minnesota Daily. The road, comments the Daily, "symbolizes the remaining bonds between Free China and the democratic west. British reversal of policy therefore stiffened Chinese morale—and Secretary Hull's overtures, which prompted the British action, strengthened Chinese faith in the United States' Far Eastern policy."

American extension of credits to China is applauded by the Eastern Illinois State Teachers College News, which says: "Despite the fact that our chances of getting our money back from destitute China are slim, the loan will further spur her dogged resistance to Japan, at least delaying, if not preventing, our entry into a Japanese war. Far more important than the loan, however, is the embargo put on scrap iron.... We furnish the market for about 75 per cent of Japan's raw silk and we still buy most of her manufactured wares. Our own industry would benefit greatly and Japan might be brought quickly to her knees if a boycott was placed on her merchandise."

At Massachusetts Institute of Technology, The Tech concludes that "although the attendant risk is heightened, the steps we have taken in the east ought not to be revoked. This aggressive policy, of course, slices our security in the east. The Philippines are still highly vulnerable and the position of Americans in China becomes more perilous. Apart from these conditions, however, no major risk is involved."

More concerned is the Daily Northwestern. "There can be no doubt," declares this publication, "that a situation is fast developing in the east which could very possibly end in war with Japan. It certainly means that we have abandoned any pretense of neutrality in the Sino-Japanese struggle. It also means that we are perhaps closer to war today than we have been since 1918."

Summing up and appealing for more aid to China, the Daily Texan points out that "the spirit of China is undaunted. There is no sign of weakening, no sign of surrender. The military might of Japan is at a stalemate. On the other hand, for the tens of millions of the Chinese people who are directly involved in this invasion the condition is tragic. Let us help our own people and one another, but let us not forget the plight of a noble people whose wisdom and learning were ancient and great when the people of the western lands were little short of savages."

By the Associated Collegiate Press

We were in error last week when we stated that freshman rules were not removed following the yearling victory in the Frosh-Soph track meet a year ago.

Although tradition says that, if the freshmen win, rules will be suspended, the Skulls and Owls have always reserved the right to continue them at their discretion. This right has never, in recent years at least, been exercised, although rumors before the meet last year were widespread that it would be.

W. B. R.

The Liberal Viewpoint

By Martin Scher

A dispatch from Lisbon, Portugal, in the Dec. 8th edition of the New York Times discloses that the United States has made available to the fascist Franco government credits for the purchase of "huge quantities of wheat, gasoline, cotton, rubber, and frozen meat in an attempt to keep Generalissimo Franco from entering the war on the side of the Axis."

Close co-operation of the British is reported. Navicerts have been issued so that Spain's "desperate needs can be met with all speed." The food shortage, the article said, is so critical that negotiations were carried through very rapidly.

United States Ambassador Weddell is understood to have made the offer several weeks ago in an interview with Franco, stipulating that none of the products go to Germany and that Spain give public declaration of non-entrance into the war. As could be expected from the Franco government, no such promise was forthcoming.

British co-operation in this program was pledged by Sir Samuel Hoare, noted appeaser, after a conference with Sumner Serrano.

Details and quantities of these products were left to trade experts of the three countries, though the amount of wheat to be shipped was announced. One million tons will be sent to Spain. Two to three hundred thousand tons will come from Argentina, with the credits guaranteed by the United States. The remainder will be domestic wheat. The credits granted were stated to be between $100,000,000 and $260,000,000.

The action of the British in this case is certainly inconsistent with the attitude taken by Lord Lothian. The British Ambassador stated that Britain would not permit food to be sent to countries under German domination. It is rather hard to understand where the distinction between Spain and these other nations fits in.

Certainly the British are aware that Franco now occupies his position as dictator through the military aid of the Axis powers in the Spanish Civil War. Certainly the British are aware that the Franco regime is a fascist one, regimenting and exploiting its people. Certainly the British are aware that many thousands of Loyalists, who fought so heroically to protect their legally elected government, have been murdered by Franco. Munich certainly taught them that appeasement accomplishes nothing.

With all these facts before them, how can they, with any degree of honesty, in the face of their protestations of devotion to democracy, see these materials sent to Spain?

Even assuming that they were prompted by humanitarian motives, the extension of permission to bring in gasoline, cotton, and rubber seems rather incongruous from the point of view of preventing starvation.

The solution may be that their hate of fascism goes only to the point where it is in a position to interfere with their commercial supremacy and to take their markets.

In the Library

By Catherine Ward

It always whets interest in new books to note where they stand on the best seller lists and how long they have basked in the warmth of public favor. There is an irresistible attraction to books that are in demand. This doesn't imply that people merely follow the herd in their choice of reading material, but they do consider that a book which can go through eighteen printings, such as Richard Llewellyn's "How Green Was My Valley," and still sell hundreds of copies is worth reading.

Publishers Weekly heads its list of November's best sellers with "For Whom the Bell Told," a novel of the Spanish war, of which the New York Times has said, "This is the best book Ernest Hemingway has written, the fullest, the deepest, the truest. It will be one of the major novels in American literature."

Also on the fiction list are Jan Struthers' "Mrs. Miniver," which has continued to be a favorite since mid-summer; "The Family," the Atlantic $10,000 prize novel by Nina Fedorova; "The Voyage," by Charles Morgan; and "Foundation Stone," by Lela Warren.

At the top of the non-fiction list stands Ann Lindbergh's "The Wave of the Future," followed by "Treason," by Mararet Armstrong; "A Treasury of the World's Great Letters," edited by M. Lincoln Schuster; "Pilgrim's Way," by John Buchan, the autobiography of Lord Tweedsmuir, late governor-general of Canada; "Bet It's a Boy," by Betty Blunt; "Europe in the Spring," by Clare Boothe, whom most of us remember as author of "The Women"; "New England: Indian Summer," by Van Wyck Brooks; and Osa Johnson's "I Married Adventure."

In The Spotlight

By Phil Pierce

When we first heard of Claude Thornhill he was famous as an arranger. Although Thornhill leads a finished and polished band, we think he should stick to arranging. His piano playing is definitely Eddy Duchin's, his personality practically nil.

Jane Essex, feminine vocalist, measured up to the mark but as for the vocal attempts of Bob Jenny, the less said the better.

Colonel Alcott was temporarily demoted to the rank of Lieutenant according to Russ Wooley, who announced the half-hour broadcast from the dance Friday night.

Hasn't two years of military training done anything for you, Russ?

"Mood Indigo" has always been one of our favorite songs and we've heard it many times, but the other night was the first time we ever saw it.

We went to see "Hotel Universe."

According to Mrs. Sidonie Gruenberg, director of the Child Study Association of America, "It is important that we respect the personality of a child in order that he may grow into a mature and co-operating adult of the future."

Changing the word respect to re-strict, we find that both Hitler and Mussolini agree with Mrs. Gruenberg.

It's not merely suitable, it's courteous to call your swing-fan friend a Mikado. The word "Mikado" means "Honorable Gate."

Talk about international complications! Benny Carter once had a jazz band made up of British and French Negroes, a Scotsman, two Dutchmen, Englishmen, Spanish-Americans, and one or two Harlemites.

By Tommy Stotler

While Bob Willets is taking time out from civilization in order to delve into the colder aspects of forestry, I'll try to disclose some facts I've learned since I have been at Maine.

Once Upon a Time

THESE facts all date back to a statement Ted Curtis made at the football banquet. It was something to the effect that Maine played fifteen games away and two in Orono. This all happened in the basketball schedule nineteen years ago.

At that time the facilities for basketball were very limited. The Alumni gym was the only place the games could be held in Orono, but Maine played two games in the Bangor City Hall. There were two games in Orono that year, also, and both of these resulted in overwhelming victories for the Bears. The Portland A.C. lost by a score of 48-21 and the New England College Five was held to 11 points while Maine scored 35. In all of her home games it was unusual for Maine to use over nine or ten men, and the quota for the trips averaged seven men.

Toured New York and Ohio

THE following is a schedule of the 1921 basketball season, just to show you what a chore the boys had ahead of them at the beginning of the season.

	Opp.	Maine
Portland A.C. at Orono	21	48
Colgate at Hamilton, N. Y.	42	24
Syracuse at Syracuse, N. Y.	17	13
Hamilton at Clinton, N. Y.	34	28
Rochester at Rochester, N. Y.	18	20
Goodyear Club at Akron, Ohio	19	23
Baldwin-Wallace at Berea, Ohio	18	19
Wittenburg at Wittenburg, Ohio	43	28
Cincinnati at Cincinnati, Ohio	32	31
New England College Five at Orono	11	35
Boston College at Boston	24	28
W. P. I. at Worcester, Mass.	26	49
Harvard at Cambridge, Mass.	36	23
M. I. T. at Boston	21	20
Portland A. C. at Portland	17	46
New Hampshire at Durham	15	9
New Hampshire at Durham	24	35

Imagine the number of classes the fellows missed while on these trips. This, combined with the lack of co-operation from the student body, resulted in basketball being dropped from the list of varsity sports in 1920. The lack of school spirit was due to the fact that there wasn't room enough in Alumni Hall to hold everyone who came to see the games.

In 1934 the Memorial gym was built and basketball came into its own at Maine. From two home games in 1921 to six games this year, and finally to seven next year when Bowdoin will join the schedule, basketball has grown in no small way. According to Ted Curtis' figures, there were 1,000 people turned away at the Rhode Island game alone last year.

Last year there were fourteen men who went on the trips each time the team played away. On one trip in 1921, seven men played four games in four days. Starting at Portland they faced the Portland A.C., then Northeastern at Boston, Rhode Island at Kingston, and finally Brown at Providence. Evidently those were the days when men were men.

Have Week to Work
Before First Games

Workouts for the varsity basketball team became much more strenuous this week, as Head Coach Bill Kenyon drove his charges hard in preparation for the coming season. With but a week of actual practice time left before the opening of the season, there remained many details to be ironed out before the Bears tackle Rhode Island on the evening of Jan. 9th.

Squad Scrimmaging Daily

Daily scrimmages marked the sessions of the candidates all during the week, with every man on the squad seeing plenty of service in the hard-fought inter-team battles. Coach Kenyon devoted some time to a thorough explanation of the 1940 basketball rules, believing that every player should be familiar with all the fine points to be found in the current rules of the game.

Kenyon also emphasized the several sections of the rulebook, in which stress is placed on the players' offensive actions when he is not handling the ball himself.

Sophomores Looking Good

Coach Kenyon was particularly pleased with the work of several of his sophomore candidates in practice. One of the smoothest-working and best-scoring combinations in this week's drills has been that composed of last year's starting freshman five: forwards, Lloyd Quint and Bert Pratt; center, Gene Hussey; guards, Lowell Ward and Dick McKee.

This quintet has looked very good, exhibiting a good floor game and uncovering a speedy scoring punch.

Freshman practice, meanwhile, has been going through similar stages. Scrimmages, with substitutions made on the unit plan, have featured practice sessions.

Coach Sam Sezak has shifted Bert Curtis back to guard on his number one unit and moved Goodwin to forward on the same team. The latter has pleased Sezak with his high percentage of baskets per attempt.

Registered at the main center of New York's City College are 1,000 men and two girls. Total enrollment is over 22,000. (A.C.P.)

New Events on
Interclass Track
Meet ProgramWorlds Record in 28-Pound Weight Toss
Predicted; 5 Dashes

An unusual schedule of events, including five hurdle races, three short dashes, and two shot put and two weight throwing events, will feature the annual interclass track meet, to be held Friday and Saturday afternoon in the field house.

The sophomores, winners in last week's Frosh-Soph meet, 108-27, will again be overwhelming favorites, with neither the juniors nor seniors expected to give them much opposition. The two upper classes, in fact, will be hard put to defeat the freshmen, with only the juniors given much chance of doing so.

First Competition for Stars

The meet will be the first competition for several men who are expected to star this winter, including Stan Phillips, sprint ace and 100 yard dash winner at the State Meet last spring; Ken Robertson, sprinter and broad jumper; Franklin Dexter, pole vaulter and high jumper; and Herb Johnson, University discus throw record holder. Absent will be Howie Ehrlendach, middle distance runner, and Jake Serota, 35 pound weight star. Both are at forestry winter camp.

Events scheduled include 40, 70, 100, 220, and 300 yard dashes, 440, 880, mile, and mile-and-a-half runs; 45, 70, and 100 yard high hurdles; 70 and 100 yard low hurdles; 12- and 16-pound shot put; 28- and 35-pound weight throw; and the javelin and discus throws and the broad jump, high jump, and pole vault.

Purpose of the unusual schedule of events is to give as many men as possible a chance to score. Each competitor will be limited to three events. Ten points instead of five will be given to the winner who breaks or ties a University or freshman record.

Stan Johnson, who has competed for the varsity for three years and will not, therefore be eligible this winter, may compete for the seniors. Coach Chester A. Jenkins predicts that both Johnson and Niles Perkins, sophomore, will throw the lighter of the two weights over 75 feet.

World's Record Probable

The 28-pound weight is an event that was dropped from the schedule of track events in this country several decades ago, but will be used in the freshman meets this year between the Maine colleges. In all probability the winning distance will be a world's record in this event, for Perkins and Johnson are the best weight throwers in the world today, far better than anyone who threw in the days when the 28-pound weight was used. It is not known exactly, however, what the best record ever made with this weight was.

The javelin, discus, and two weight throws will be held late Friday afternoon, while the other field events and all the running events will be held Saturday, commencing at 2 p.m.

Sophomores Swamp
Frosh in Runaway

The undefeated sophomore track team rolled along to another overwhelming victory last week when the freshmen were the victims, 108-27. Only yearling winner was Al Hutchinson, who took the javelin throw with a toss of 149 feet 2½ inches. Freshmen took all three places in this event.

Niles Perkins, former Bowdoin star, opened his University of Maine career by setting a new meet record, 48 feet 3 inches, in the 35-pound weight throw, but the outstanding performance of the meet was that by Bill Hadlock, who showed mid-season form in running the 45 yard high hurdles in 6.1 seconds, another meet record.

Hadlock High Scorer

Hadlock was individual high scorer, with 18 points. He won both the high and low hurdles and the broad jump and tied for first in the high jump. Hutchinson was top man for the freshmen, with 11 points. He placed second in both the 100 and 220 yard dashes.

Dick Martinez clipped 12 seconds off the meet record, 9 off the college record, as he took the mile-and-a-half run in 7:21.7. Farris, second, and Condon, third, a freshman, were both also under the old records.
